both, 5 Star president Moreno and vice president Barlow are taking a new direction in life, geographically and otherwise. The 5 Star Travel office at 495 Columbus Avenue will close in mid-December, with Moreno working on a more limited basis from the couple's new home in Fort Lauderdale while sales representative Jack Campbell continues to operate from West Roxbury. Over lunch at Shun's Kitchen, Moreno talked about his accomplishments and his and Barlow's plans for the future.

A native of Curaçao who speaks 5 languages, Moreno became a travel agent over 30 years ago, at a time when gay travelers were not accepted socially in many destinations here in the US and abroad and were not allowed to reserve lodgings as same sex couples.

Gay-owned guest houses, usually offering limited services and amenities, were often the only option for gay travelers. In the ensuing decades, as domestic partnerships and same sex marriage became legal in the US and a number of other countries and LGBT tolerance spread internationally, gay travelers have come to enjoy a broader range of destinations and lodging options. Consequently, the guest house has become an endangered species.

"Look at Key West: there used to be 50 or 60 guest houses and now there are about six. You have to look at who is checking them in. Thirty five years ago, it was a different generation. Now you have baby boomers and people born even later who are checking them in," Moreno observed. Gay-tolerant destinations were similarly limited, Moreno recalled, to a few places such as New York City, San Francisco, Key West, Fire Island and Provincetown.

Moreno added that in his earlier days, the Greek Islands such as Mikonos, Santorini, Crete and Lesbos were receptive to gay travelers, but the access to the islands was through Athens, which posed a problem. Moreno recalled having a hotel key thrown at him in Athens when the desk clerk realized that he and his partner were planning to stay in one room. "Nowadays, you may have trouble if you try to go to certain religious parts of the world like Iran, but for the most part, the world is our oyster," Moreno said.

The arrival of the Internet in everyone's lives and the subsequent proliferation of travel sites such as Trivago, Expedia and Hotwire have changed the nature of travel, ending consumer dependence on travel agents to issue airline tickets and reshaping the role of the agent.

Moreno said, "At one point, we had over 3,100 clients. That is more than 10 per day. In 2016 we had about 400." Moreno plans to continue working with current clients, whose ranks are graying, mostly doing tours, cruises, vacation packages and honeymoons from his home office in Florida using Skype, e-mail and other telecommunications. Campbell, who specializes in corporate and group travel, will also telecommute, continuing to work

Moreno and Barlow plan to return to Boston "at least monthly," explaining that he and Barlow are looking into housing for those return trips. "I have always considered myself Bostonian since I moved here in 1982. I have my friends here, my favorite restaurants, my doctors, and I cannot go from 60 to 0. I love Boston so much."

Moreno stressed also that he plans to continue as a board member of Community Research Initiative of New England (CRI), which works with MIT to research a cure for AIDS and Hepatitis C as well as providing treatment assistance and awareness of the diseases.

In Fort Lauderdale, Moreno and Barlow will get involved in causes dear to their hearts: for Moreno, that means helping out at no-kill cat and dog shelters, while Barlow is interested in volunteering for cancer causes in honor of loved ones who have been stricken. Moreno also plans to continue indulging his passion for travel.

In terms of the new business model for 5 Star, working remotely and visiting Boston regularly, Moreno commented, "It's the new way. This is what [business] has become. [The South End] is an expensive neighborhood, and the time has come where you can't have the rent and everything. But we will continue. It's what I love to do. I am not ready for that rocking chair on the porch. Travel has been from my heart from the beginning."

Suspect Charged in the Shooting Death of Dennis Parham in the area of Kendall Street & Shawmut Ave in Roxbury

Less than four months after the shooting death of Dennis Parham, the man responsible for the crime is behind bars. On Sunday, November 5, 2017, members of the Boston Police Fugitive Apprehension Unit arrested Charles Williams, 38, of Boston and charged him for the murder of Dennis Parham during an incident which occurred near the Lenox Street Housing Development earlier this year on July 15, 2017. Williams is expected to be arraigned in Boston Municipal Court tomorrow, Monday, November 6, 2017.

Said Commissioner Evans: "I want to commend my officers for the relentless pursuit of justice that lead to the arrest of the suspect wanted in connection to the shooting death of Dennis Parham. In addition to making our city safer, hopefully, news of this arrest will bring with it some small level of comfort and closure to Mr. Parham's family and friends."

terrupting South Boston's historic dominance of the District 2 seat.

While South End-specific voting numbers could not be obtained by press time, visits to the Cathedral gymnasium and Benjamin Franklin Institute of Technology voting stations and observations from volunteers outside polling places suggested a steady flow of voters with peaks in the morning and after-work hours. Ultimately, South Boston's Ed Flynn, a probation officer and the son of former Mayor Ray Flynn, surpassed Kelley in a down-to-the-wire race with a margin of 508 votes out of 14,458 cast according to unofficial results posted on the City of Boston web site Tuesday night.

The District 2 result was not declared until a final precinct in Chinatown was counted, with the announcement coming around 11:00 PM. The District 7 seat being vacated by mayoral hopeful Tito Jackson went to children's advocate Kim Janey, who bested opponent Rufus J. Faulk almost 1,100 votes, or 4,940 versus Faulk's 3,852. Jackson was defeated handily in the citywide mayoral vote, with 36,433 votes or 34 per cent versus incumbent Mayor Martin J. Walsh's 70,125, or 65 per cent of the vote, Jackson attracted a following in the South End particularly with his focus on affordable housing. The last incumbent mayor to lose an election was Mayor Michael Curley in 1949.

After a dismal turnout in the South End for the September 26 preliminary election, which winnowed the field of 7 candidates down to two, Flynn and Kelley, in District 2 and a field of 13 District 7 candidates down to finalists Janey and Faulk, South End organizers mobilized to get neighbors to the polls and coalesced around District 2's Kelley, who lived in the South End for over 25 years, moving to nearby Bay Village less than two years ago.

Kelley was a frequent presence in the South End, beginning weeks before his March 30 campaign launch at the Villa Victoria Center for the Arts. With Kelley's win in the preliminary election, neighborhood activists sought to get out the vote in the hope of gaining a voice for the South End on the City Council, which divides the South End into three different districts, none of which has been held by a South End resident.

Exhortations to get out the vote proliferated on South End-themed social media sites for weeks before November 7, and Washington Gateway Main Street organized #Shop the South End, a reward program offering free gifts and discounts to shoppers wearing "I Voted" stickers. Eighteen businesses, including Flour Bakery, Uniform, Niche, Table and Tulip, FoMuvegan ice cream, European Wax Center, Barre 3, Bark Place and Skoah offered such enticements as free eyebrow waxes, coffee, exercise classes, dog treats and more, while other retailers offered discounts of 10 to 20 per cent off purchases.

The afternoon shift manager at Flour, 1595 Washington Street, estimated that 20 voters per hour streamed in with to claim their free, small cups of coffee. Former South End resident Grace Holley sat at a table at Flour eating a salad and drinking her coffee with a rose she received at Niche, a small succulent from Table and Tulip, freshly waxed brows from European Wax Center and the sweet memory of a cookie she received at Formaggio Kitchen South End.

After the polls closed, Kelley followers packed Boston Chops, 1375 Washington Street, nibbling passed treats such as giant onion rings, steak tartare bites, tempura brussels sprouts and macaroni and cheese while awaiting the arrival of the candidate and news of the outcome.

State representative Aaron Michlewitz introduced Kelley's remarks, as he did at Kelley's campaign launch party in March. Following the election outcome, Kelley spoke with gratitude and hope. "I am so impressed, so moved, and so filled with love and appreciation. We've added 4,000 votes in the past month. Thousands of people came out and voted. We've organized and energized so many people around a progressive agenda. We are sending a message that this is a city that should work for everyone, that is inclusive of everyone. I'm sad but I'm also excited," Kelley said. He added, "This isn't the end, it's just the beginning."

BPD Detail Officers Subdue Armed Suspect After Larceny and Carjacking

SUBMITTED BY BOSTON POLICE DEPARTMENT

At about 4:30 PM on Thursday October 19, 2017, officers working a paid detail on a movie set in the South End made an onsite arrest after a larceny and a carjacking in the area of Shawmut Avenue and Union Park Street. The officers were flagged down by a witness who was pointing towards a male suspect, later identified as Victor Lee, 52, of Dorchester, while stating that he had just stolen a woman's purse from inside a nearby business.

As the officers went to approach the suspect, they observed a large knife in his hand as he turned around and began to advance towards them. An officer drew his firearm as the distance quickly began to close while ordering him to drop his weapon. The suspect then changed direction, knife still in hand, and opened the passenger side door of a stopped motor vehicle and quickly climbed inside. The startled operator was able to exit the vehicle as the officers began to surround it. As an officer approached, the suspect threw his knife out of the window, directly at the officer, narrowly missing him.

At this time, the officers sprayed the suspect with pepper spray and were then able to remove him from the car and place him in custody after a violent struggle. Several officers and the suspect were treated on scene for exposure to the pepper spray. The suspect will appear in Boston Municipal Court on charges of Carjacking, Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon and Resisting Arrest.

The investigation into the initial larceny remains ongoing at this time.

Said Commissioner Evans, "I want to commend my officers for their bravery and restraint when confronted by an armed suspect. I'm grateful that they're all alright and that they didn't have to resort to deadly force, which clearly looks like it would've been justified based on the circumstances of the impending threat. This incident could've ended very differently for the suspect."

South End purse snatcher charged with menacing cops with a knife

By ADAM GAFFIN

Boston Police report officers working a detail on the set of Denzel Washington's Equalizer 2 movie in the South End used pepper spray, rather than their guns, to subdue a purse snatcher who advanced on them with a knife.

Police say Victor Lee, 52, of Dorchester, grabbed a woman's purse in a store in the area of Shawmut Avenue and Union Park Street around 4:30 p.m. yesterday.

As the officers went to approach the suspect, they observed a large knife in his hand as he turned around and began to advance towards them. An officer drew his firearm as the distance quickly began to close while ordering him to drop his weapon. The suspect then changed direction, knife still in hand, and opened the passenger side door of a stopped motor vehicle and quickly climbed inside. The startled operator was able to exit the vehicle as the officers began to surround it. As an officer approached, the suspect threw his knife out of the window, directly at the officer, narrowly missing him. At this time, the officers sprayed the suspect with pepper spray and were then able to remove him from the car and place him in custody after a violent struggle. Several officers and the suspect were treated on scene for exposure to the pepper spray.

A Boston Municipal Court judge today set bail at $25,000 on charges of armed carjacking, assault with a dangerous weapon, carrying a dangerous weapon, larceny over $250 and resisting arrest, the Suffolk County District Attorney's office reports.

Earlier this month, two security guards at an Equalizer 2 set on Whittier Street in Roxbury were shot.
