care and innovation in professional nursing practice.

ANCC thoroughly evaluated BMC nursing practice in their review of submitted documents that included exemplars and outcome data, as well as interviews of clinical nurses,

Guest Opinion

In support of flexibility, and more

BY EILAKEISHA SPENCER, M.Ed

Between taking care of my child and running the Dorchester-based Boston Lesbians Urban Foundation, which uplifts members of the LGBTQ+ community in Boston, it can be tough to pay the bills. For the past 3 years, I have relied on the flexibility of driving with Lyft to earn additional income while I balance my personal and professional goals. I am extremely proud of what I have accomplished, both as a parent and a community leader, and grateful that the independence of rideshare was there for me when I needed it. Unfortunately, change may be coming for rideshare and delivery drivers in the form of lawsuits and court mandates that would eliminate this flexibility forever. I am joining the effort to save it.

A lawsuit currently making its way through the courts in Massachusetts would force all rideshare and delivery companies to make their drivers employees. That would mean bosses, set shifts, flat wages, requests for time off - all the things about regular jobs that just don't mesh with the demands of raising a child or running a non-profit. The politicians and special interests behind this effort say it will bring new benefits to drivers, but at the cost of our independence.

That's not a trade I am willing to make. So, I am joining thousands of other drivers, from communities across Massachusetts in supporting a ballot question that would offer the best of both options. The proposed ballot question would guarantee our continued flexibility as drivers, including our ability to make our own schedules, drive when and where we want, as little or as much as we want, whenever we want. But it would also guarantee us 120% of minimum wage, paid sick time, health care stipends, and more.

Importantly for me as a parent, the ballot question would automatically enroll drivers in the state's Paid Family & Medical Leave program - just the same as any other employee in Massachusetts. And importantly for me as an advocate, the question would protect drivers from discrimination based upon race, color, religious creed, national origin, sex, gender identity, genetic information, ancestry, status as a veteran, pregnancy, or sexual orientation.

With the flexibility of rideshare, I put myself through school to earn a Master's in Mental Health; I pay for those unexpected parental expenses; I work every day on the ground and in communities to ensure that Massachusetts is a safe place for LGBTQ+ individuals to live and thrive. If the courts take away my flexibility to drive, to earn - none of this will be possible for me. The ballot question will protect me and other drivers, and ensure that our options are not being stripped away without our input.

I urge Massachusetts voters to join me in supporting this ballot initiative and stand with thousands of people like me who rely on the flexibility that driving provides.

nurse leaders, the BMC executive team and members of the Board of Trustees.

"BMC's Magnetâ designation was made possible by years of hard work by our Nursing Department and many other teams across the hospital," said Kate Walsh, President and CEO of BMC. "This is a reflection of the high quality, compassionate care that our nursing team provides across the hospital and in all of our clinics, and our nurses should feel incredibly proud, as I do."

"Magnetâ recognition is an honor that reaffirms the professionalism and dedication of our entire staff, and reinforces the core values that guide how we do our jobs every day," said Nancy Gaden, BMC's Chief Nursing Officer. "As a Magnetâ-recognized organization, we live by our mission - exceptional care without exception."

Boston Medical Center (BMC) is a private, not-for-profit, 514-bed, academic medical center that is the primary teaching affiliate of Boston University School of Medicine. It is the largest and busiest provider of trauma and emergency services in New England. BMC offers specialized care for complex health problems and is a leading research institution, receiving more than $166 million in sponsored research funding in fiscal year 2019. It is the 13th largest funding recipient in the U.S. from the National Institutes of Health among independent hospitals. In 1997, BMC founded Boston Medical Center Health Plan, Inc., now one of the top ranked Medicaid MCOs in the country, as a non-profit managed care organization. Boston Medical Center and Boston University School of Medicine are partners in Boston HealthNet - 12 community health centers focused on providing exceptional health care to residents of Boston. year of employing Boston high schoolers to create large-scale public art projects across Boston's neighborhoods and City parks.

"These murals will connect and inspire so many in Mattapan and across our city," said Mayor Michelle Wu. "Thank you to all of our Mural Crew artists for creating art that celebrates the diversity and vibrancy of our communities - and I am thrilled to see what you all bring to our neighborhoods next"

During the month of July 2021, the Mayor's Mural Crew painted "Tout Moun Se Moun/One Love: Mattapan Tap Tap Mural," a 50 foot by 18 foot mural located at the rear entrance of Chase Bank on Blue Hill Avenue. In August, the crew painted "Eat What You Grow Reap What You Sow," a 31 foot by 14 foot mural at the corner of Itopalian Street and Edgewater Drive, along the Neponset River.

Murals were painted by a team of youth and adult artists, including Anthony Amaral, Ava Chow, Brenda Cartagena, Bobby Zabin, Camila Aguilera-Steinert, Eli Swanson, Heidi Schork, Isabel Slater, Jabari Gichuru, Jerome Jones, Leah Prodigalidad, Lucy Edelstein-Rosenberg, Liz O'Brien, Mila Fields-Zayas, Nate McKay, Niamh Mulligan, Sin Porter, Terrance Wharton, Upasana Patel, and Zariyah Wilkerson.

"This was my third summer working as a youth muralist with The Mayor's Mural Crew; it was a wonderful experience—we got to experience the effects of art on a community, and had a lot of fun doing it. Both murals directly depict people who would stop by to observe the process, and the cultures of those living in Mattapan, which made both projects so special," said Niamh Mulligan, who began studying studio art at Vassar College in September 2021.

"Painting a huge wall by hand in a group with others and having to work together to paint one cohesive image was challenging to say the least, especially when people had differing views, but it was all worth it in the end once we stepped back and saw the whole piece," shared Lucy Edelstein-Rosenberg, a recent Boston Latin School graduate, who began studying studio art at Suffolk University in September 2021.

"Completing these two murals showed me how strong you can build something, when teammates learn how to work together. Through each stage of each mural, our bond became stronger as we learned from our mistakes and each other. It was important to all of us to serve the Mattapan community by sharing messages of unity and love," said Upasana Patel, a graduate student at Boston

Tout Moun Se Moun/One Love: Mattapan Tap Tap Mural

A large-scale homage to Toussaint L'Ouverture and Marcus Garvey was previously displayed on the wall when it was owned by Santander Bank in 2015. For this project under the patronage of Chase Bank, the Mayor's Mural Crew developed a theme around the Caribbean residents of Mattapan Square by incorporating traditional Haitian and Jamaican stylistic elements on a larger than life size tap tap bus (tap taps are brightly painted vehicles with metal covers that serve as taxis in Haiti). The work features iconic architectural motifs in the form of Haitian gingerbread houses, bright gradients, and plants native to both Jamaica, Haiti, and Mattapan to show the diversity of the neighborhood. All the portraits were sourced directly from Mattapan residents, community members who play essential roles in public transit, health-care, variety stores offering cultural foods, and greenspace maintenance. L'Ouverture and Garvey were done in the style of the banknotes from their respective countries to highlight their legacy, but also the exchange of value that occurs between US residents and their families back home, as well as the investments Chase Bank is making in this community. The lettering was done in a lively color scheme as would be on an actual tap tap bus, with all the variety of script fonts, bold sans serifs, in-line color blocking, white starbursts, and outlines. The community was pleased with the work of the Mural Crew, often showing their support with honks, cheers, photos, long conversations, and even by providing food and water for the crew.

Eat What You Grow Reap What You Sow: Edgewater Drive Mural

The Neponset River and greenspace at large has been historically inaccessible to the residents of Edgewater Drive and Mattapan as a result of redlining. This mural was done in conjunction with the Mayor's Office of Food Access, the Edgewater Neighborhood Association, in addition to the neighboring food bank run by Reverend Homcil and the wall donated by Guerini Inc. The aim of the mural is to call attention to the need for community garden space and local food access. It features two teen volunteers from the Edgewater Community Garden, Cornelius Simmons and Kayla Docker, prominently tending to their garden and a longstanding figure in the community and gardener extraordinaire, Winfield Russell, in the center. The rolling Blue Hills are in the distance behind the houses of Mattapan. All of the vegetables in the mural such as Swiss chard, maize, Honduran beans, callaloo, tomatoes, sunflowers, collard greens, cabbage, were taken directly from the food being grown in the garden. The residents of Edgewater Drive have boldly taken up the task of ensuring that their community can eat fresh vegetables and herbs "By Any Greens Necessary."
