With the BAC Distinguished Alumni Award

SUBMITTED BY RODE ARCHITECTS

RODE Architects Principal and Director of Interior Design Jessica Haley has been awarded the 2022 Distinguished Alumni in Interior Architecture Award from the Boston Architectural College (BAC) Alumni Council for her exemplary accomplishments, service and commitment to the field of interior design. Haley earned her master's in Interior Architecture from the BAC in 2012 and presently serves as an adjunct faculty member at the school.

Haley, who joined RODE in 2013, was recognized by the BAC for her depth of experience and originality, often combining tried

Wide-ranging diversity dominated a real return for theater and audiences in 2022. Strong revivals, premieres, visiting fare and pre-

Broadway tryouts brought deserving attention to the work of such important talents as Lynn Nottage, Harvey Fierstein, Samuel Beckett and August Wilson. Wilson received fitting extra attention as Huntington Theatre—which regularly showcased his 20th century-spanning canon—named the

CRIME

17 Year-Old Arrested in Possession of a Loaded Firearm in South End

FROM BPD NEWS

At about 10:15 PM, on Saturday, December 3, 2022, officers assigned to District D-4 (South End), initiated a traffic stop in the area of Washington Street and Rutland Street that resulted in the firearm arrest of a 17-year-old male juvenile from Boston.

While on patrol, officers observed a motor vehicle without its lights illuminated, traveling on Washington Street near West Dedham Street. Officers activated their emergency lights and sirens to safely stop the motor vehicle. Officers made contact with the licensed driver and after further investigation recovered a loaded firearm from the male juvenile passenger. The firearm was determined to be a 9mm loaded with one round in the chamber and fifteen rounds in the magazine.

The 17-year-old male was arrested and charged with; Delinquent to wit; Unlawful Possession of a Firearm and Delinquent to wit; Unlawful Possession of Ammunition. He is expected to be arraigned in Boston Juvenile Court.

and true design with an innovative approach. Haley has worked on projects in a variety of architectural sectors including hospitality, multi-family, corporate, complex institutional and academic research, with notable projects that include Bar Volpe, Cambria Hotel Boston Downtown-South Boston and The Lexington.

"We're proud of Jess for receiving this high honor from the Boston Architectural College," said Principal and Co-Founder of RODE Architects, Eric Robinson, "Jess brings a creative and thoughtful approach to all of her work and continuously amazes us with the spaces she is able to create on behalf of our clients. We at RODE, along with the BAC, are very lucky to have her as a part of our respective teams."

Haley holds a BFA in Fine Arts from The New England School of Art and Design at Suffolk University, where she concentrated in figurative painting and sculpture. She is noted for her freeform approach to interior design and architecture, rooted in her deep love for the arts.

"I am grateful to be honored by the BAC for my work in interior design," said Haley. "To still have a connection to the very school where my passion for interior design was fostered is truly humbling and I feel fortunate to be able to put that education into practice every day at RODE."

Boston Architectural College is the first accredited architecture program with a work component in the US. Since the establishment of the program, BAC has introduced programs in interior architecture, landscape architecture, and design studies.

lobby of its handsomely renovated main stage for this late great dramatist and inaugurated its return with his masterful “Joe Turner’s Come and Gone.” There were thoughtful one-person plays like “What the Constitution Means to Me” and Alanna Mitchell’s uncompromising climate change examination “Sea Sick” (both presented by Arts Emerson). The Emerson Colonial Theatre hosted “A Beautiful Noise,” a striking Neil Diamond-centered new musical with a terrific lead performance by Will Swenson.

Education took center stage in very different but provocative plays—the SpeakEasy Stage Company premiere of Iran-set “English” and Huntington Theatre’s Boston-focused “Common Ground.” Spirited women—the real life pre-computer pioneer Ada Lovelace in “Ada and the Machine” (Central Square Theater), a Black executive in “Fabulation” (Lyric Stage Company of Boston) and a home front director during World War Two in “Into the Breeches” (Hub Theatre Company of Boston)—gained spirited focus.

In a gratifyingly busy year, the following is this critic’s list of the best of 2022:

A Gentleman’s Guide to Love and Murder (Lyric Stage Company)—Jared Troilo proved a vocal standout as the gentleman murderer and Neil A. Casey fully embodied all of his victims.

Joe Turner’s Come and Gone (Huntington Theatre)—Huntington Theatre returned to this powerful Pittsburgh-set look at the spiritual and personal quests of diverse African-Americans with great feeling and a commanding performance by James Milord.

Life of Pi (American Repertory Theatre, running through January 29, 2023 before Broadway, beginning in March)—Storytelling and sublime puppetry—evoking an orangutan, a zebra, a hyena and especially a tiger named Richard Parker, among others—combined for the title youth’s riveting rite of passage and a Rashomon-like investigation of truth and reality.

Mr. Parent (Lyric Stage)—Gifted actor Maurice Emmanuel Parent captured his challenging stint as a Boston public school teacher and insightfully commented on Hub education in a one-man tour de force sharply penned by Melinda Lopez.

On Beckett (Arts Emerson)—Bill Irwin, with the ease of a master actor and the flair of an inspired clown, presented excerpts from well-known and lesser-known works in a one-man exploration of the playwright’s remarkable range.

The Chinese Play (Central Square Theater)—This disarming play called into question the manipulation of an actual young 19th century Chinese immigrant brought to the United States in an unusual ‘show’ that exploited stereotypes.

The Inheritance (SpeakEasy Stage Company)—Eddie Shields was electrifyingly moving as Jewish gay protagonist Eric Glass in the year’s most ambitious staging—a two-part, six hour plus Tony Award-winning adaptation of the E.M. Forster masterwork “Howards End.”

To Kill a Mockingbird (Broadway in Boston)—Richard Thomas found all of Atticus Finch’s humanity in an adaptation of the Harper Lee classic that intriguingly avoids easy adulation for the prejudice-battling defense attorney Torch Song (Moonbox Productions at the Boston Center for the Arts)—Peter Mill as gay Jewish drag queen Arnold Beckoff and Bobbie Steinbach as his judgmental but caring mother are explosively good in this emotionally rich revival of Harvey Fierstein’s Tony Award play.

Twilight, Los Angeles, 1992—Five superb actors brought the many interviewees of this Anna Deavere Smith still-timely exploration of ethnic and racial conflict to vivid life.

Honorable Mention

A Beautiful Noise (Emerson Colonial Theatre), Ada and the Engine (Central Square Theater), Grand Horizons (Gloucester Stage Company), In the Breeches (Hub Theatre Company of Boston), Little Women (Greater Boston Stage Company), Macbeth (Merrimack Repertory Theatre), Much Ado About Nothing (Commonwealth Shakespeare Company), What the Constitution Means to Me (Arts Emerson).
