South End roof-deck battle lands in court

COURTESY ADAM GAFFIN, www.universalhub.com

The owner of a South End condo and roof patio sued the Zoning Board of Appeal on June 1 to block construction of a pair of decks—one with a grill and fire pit—atop the building next door.

In his suit, filed in Suffolk

Superior Court, Douglas Rudisch, who lives on the seventh floor of 1166 Washington St., asks a judge to “annul” the board’s unanimous decision on March 28 to allow two decks at the neighboring Columbian Building at 1154-1160 Washington St.: An 887-square-foot deck avail-

Boston 10th in 2023 ParkScore rankings

SUBMITTED BY THE CITY OF BOSTON

Boston has landed near the top of the 2023 ParkScore list, compiled by The Trust for Public Land, that ranks public access residents and visitors have to parks and park amenities. The annual report uses mapping technology and demographic data to determine how well the largest cities in the United States are meeting the need for parks. Boston tied for tenth place on the 2023 ParkScore index, climbing two spots from its 2022 finish and rejoining the ParkScore top ten for the first time since 2020. Boston shares tenth position with New York City.

"We're thrilled that Boston has moved up from twelfth place in 2022 to tenth place in this year's ParkScore list," said Ryan Woods, Commissioner of the Boston Parks and Recreation Department. "This recognition reflects our ongoing commitment to providing our residents with accessible, high-quality parks and park amenities. We will continue prioritizing services and investment in our parks, ensuring that Boston remains a vibrant, family-friendly, and green city for all residents and visitors."

Boston and San Francisco are the only ParkScore cities to provide 100 percent of residents with access to a local park within a 10-minute walk of their homes. Boston repeated its perfect park access rating this year despite strong population growth—an impressive accomplishment.

Boston also lifted its ParkScore with solid access for park acreage. Boston reserves 17.7 percent of the city's area for parks, among the country's best and far above the national ParkScore average of 9.8 percent. Boston earned top marks for splash pads and other water features. St. Paul received top marks for basketball hoops, and Las Vegas scored best for playgrounds.

ParkScore ratings are based equally on three factors: park access, which measures the percentage of residents living within a 10-minute walk of a park (approximately ½-mile); park size, based on a city's median park size and the percentage of total city area dedicated to parks; and services and investment, which combines the number of playgrounds per 10,000 city residents and per capita park spending.

Boston is among the national leaders working to promote community health at local parks. For example, the West of Washington Coalition, a neighborhood group in Dorchester, seeks to provide access to parks by sponsoring community events that welcome neighbors to its newly established WOW Family Park. The park offers access to the outdoors by providing free, non-competitive programming for adults, children, and families to play, exercise, and socialize.

WOW Family Park will soon be part of the planned Fairmount Greenway, a 9-mile urban trail through Boston's Dorchester, Mattapan, Hyde Park, and Readville neighborhoods connecting to multiple park options. Trust for Public Land is a partner in this effort and assists with various facets of the project by providing funding opportunities and planning expertise.

Roof

able to residents of all eight units, with room for up to 49 people at a time, and a smaller, private 155-square-foot deck.

Rudisch says the larger deck would become a noisy nuisance at eye level of his unit and small patio. He says the larger deck, which will also have chairs and tables, will intrude on his privacy—his patio and living room are within eyesight of the deck area—and reduce the value of his unit. Also:

"Use of the proposed communal roof decks at the Property for parties and functions will result in noise levels, including from amplification of music, that violate the Regulations for the Control of Noise in the City of Boston and will interfere with Rudisch's ability to use and enjoy his property.

Use of fire pits and gas grills on the roof of the property will introduce open flame on the roof and increase the risk of fire to Rudisch's property."

Legally, Rudisch argues, the board exceeded its authority. Roof decks in general are a "conditional" use in the South End—which means they can be approved with a simple once-over by the board. But Rudisch's attorney argues the board loses the right to grant a simple "conditional" approval if the building already exceeds the maximum allowed height along Washington Street of 70 feet, which he says the Columbian Building does, by some eight feet, and that the board failed to make the case the decks should get a variance from that.

The board granted a variance after the building's zoning attorney argued that an existing parapet would shield the decks from view from the street and from the nearby Peters Park, that they would be behind existing mechanical equipment between them and Rudisch's condo, and that the building went up in 1892, long before current zoning came into effect.

The board did not consider the gas-fired fire pit and grill, because those are subject to a separate review process by Inspectional Services and the Boston Fire Department; the building's attorney said "there are many, many, many roof decks that have such devices."

the short list for the Library renovation. These include, in ranked order:

- 1) Utile, Inc
- 2) Oudens Ello Architecture, LLC
- 3) Annum Architects, Inc
- 4) Schwartz/Silver Architects, Inc

The top contender, Utile, has significant experience with other branch libraries (such as Roxbury and Jamaica Plain), a strong community engagement process, and a design inclination toward transparency/natural light.

Fee negotiation with Utile has begun. The project will likely be presented for formal approval to the Public Facilities Commission (PFC) at its mid-July meeting. (Information re how to join this public meeting can be found on the PFC section of the boston.gov website.)

Following approval, the City Hall contracting process will begin. As the contracting process is expected to take 1-2 months, work on the study and design phases will likely begin in late summer/early fall. The design process usually last a year, and construction about two years.

Community Engagement Process

As part of the study and design phases, the architects will reach out to the community for input on the project. They will host four meetings for this purpose, which will also be attended by BPL staff, Public Facilities staff, and all interested community members. It is expected that the first meeting will be virtual and subsequent ones will be hybrid.

In addition to these architect-led meetings, BPL staff will reach out to engage with the community, perhaps with specific groups, such as seniors, students, etc.

As they begin their work, the architects will develop a project timeline, which will be published on the South End Branch page of the BPL website, as well as on FOSEL's website and via links and through other social media.

Interim Library Services

Because the South End Branch will be closed for a significant period of time during renovation, it is critical that BPL offers enhanced interim library services. BPL staff are optimistic that the space offered by United South End Settlements may be usable as a fixed location to house temporary operations and programs such as story time, book clubs, and workforce development, as well as book drop-off. As noted above, BPL is also looking into using a bike bookmobile.

Concerts in the Library Park return this summer! Join us on these Tuesdays: July 18th, August 1st, August 15th, and August 29th.
