Oklahoma! Reagle Music Theatre of Greater Boston, Waltham, through July 2. 781-891-5600 or reaglemusictheatre.org

JULES BECKER
Contributing Writer

The Reagle Music Theatre of Greater Boston's current revival of "Oklahoma!" is so blessed with Hub talent—to borrow from Ado Annie—local audiences "Can't Say No" to its pleasures. For many years now, RMT has benefited greatly from graduates of Boston Conservatory and Emerson College, and its revival of Rodgers and Hammerstein's first collaboration (1943 special Pulitzer Prize 1944) is no exception. In fact, the two leads—gifted Jared Troilo as Curley and big-voiced Kayla Shimizu as Laurey—are respective graduates of the Boston Conservatory and Emerson College. Even RMT artistic director Rachel Bertone has taught at both schools, and her double duty here as director and choreographer is making the company's 54th season opener a high-stepping winner.

"Oklahoma!" is unquestionably a dance-rich musical—all the way back to the standout original Agnes de Mille dream ballet that closes the first act. Multi-talented Bertone worked with deMille protégé Genze

Blackstone/Franklin Square Neighborhood Association Scholarship Awards

On June 16, the South End's Blackstone/Franklin Square Neighborhood Association honored 21 local students with scholarship awards. Councilor Ed Flynn and Rep. John Moran joined the awards ceremony at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. For over 15 years, the scholarship program has supported young people pursuing higher education who live or go to school in the South End or are involved in a South End community organization. Unlike many scholarships that fund only tuition, the awards can be used for costs like computers and school fees. The program is run by a group of dedicated volunteers and funded by charitable contributions and welcomes the involvement of all South End community members. South End-based Habitat for Humanity Greater Boston plans sustainable and affordable homes in Roslindale

SUBMITTED BY HABITAT FOR HUMANITY GREATER BOSTON

Habitat for Humanity Greater Boston has received the annual Best in Sustainability Award from its parent organization, Habitat for Humanity International, recognizing its innovative design for four environmentally-friendly, energy-efficient affordable homeowner units planned for Walter Street in Roslindale.

The design for the new homes at 104 Walter St., near Roslindale Square and the Arnold Arboretum, showcases Habitat Greater Boston's commitment to incorporating cutting edge sustainable design elements into affordable homes for hardworking families. The plans incorporate Passive House standards intended to significantly reduce the homes' carbon footprint and promote climate resiliency.

"We're honored and humbled to have been chosen for this award out of Habitat for Humanity affiliates all over the world," Habitat Greater Boston President and CEO Jim Kostaras said. "This represents the future of affordable home building, bringing it to the forefront of climate resilience and investing in families and sustainable communities."

Following a competitive process, the City of Boston selected Habitat Greater Boston, in partnership with non-profit Adaptiv Architecture & Planning, to build affordable housing on the Walter Street property. The project is in the final permitting stages, and Habitat Greater Boston plans to break ground on the site before the end of this year, pending approval from the city.

"We've worked alongside the Roslindale community and Habitat Greater Boston throughout this project to develop a climate resilient and sustainable design," said Robert Freni, CEO and founder of Adaptiv Architecture & Planning. "Together, we've worked hard to develop a project that is well designed and highly energy efficient to give the future homeowners a great place to live and grow, while keeping their operational costs as low as possible."

Additional partners on the project include RDH Building Science, which provided consulting services on Passive House design standards and building enclosure, and Bellalta 3 Design, which did landscape design for the site.

Plans for the site include a gut renovation of an existing home and construction of a second building in the style of a barn that once stood on the property. Each of the two buildings will have two condominium units designed for families.

"The landscape design complements and integrates with the sensitive environment of the adjacent Roslindale wetlands," said Antonia Bellalta, a landscape architect and founder of Bellalta 3 Design. "The design embraces the concept of the original home and barn to transform a single-family home into a four-family community. Maximizing a small site by creating multiuse outdoor gatherings spaces will create a natural setting for the new families to thrive as a community."

The new homes will use significantly less energy than traditional homes through robust enclosure design and incorporating high efficiency systems for heating and cooling, ventilation, and lighting. All the systems will be electric, and the buildings will have solar panels on the roofs. The homes will contribute to reaching the City of Boston's 2050 carbon-neutrality goals.

"The Passive House design of these homes makes a leap forward in reducing operational carbon emissions of the built environment by considering whole-building performance early in the design process," said Andrew Steingiser, associate, senior project architect, and Passive House consultant at RDH. "Performance of building enclosure and mechanical systems are evaluated as part of the balanced energy budget. Designing this way helps future-proof these homes so that they remain resilient and affordable in future climates."

An additional benefit of the design will be a significant reduction in the future homeowners' energy bills, providing added financial security for families, said Micki Younger, architecture and sustainable design coordinator at Habitat Greater Boston.

"It's an honor to be recognized for our work toward sustainable building that benefits the planet and families," she said. "This project shows that affordability and sustainability can be one and the same. This is a direction in design we plan to continue at future sites."

The Walter Street development will also provide badly needed affordable homes amid the region's housing crisis.

Soaring rents and a mounting shortage of affordable housing options have put homeownership out of reach of many families. Greater Boston has some of the highest housing costs in the nation, putting homeownership out of reach of a growing number of families who face displacement from their homes and communities due to rising rents. The Boston Foundation's 2022 Greater Boston Housing Report Card reports that nearly half of all renters in the region pay more than 30% of their income on rent.

Families who partner with Habitat Greater Boston earn between 40% and 80% of the area median income. They work

Commonwealth Provisionally Designates Boston Medical Center Team as Redevelopment Partner for the Shattuck Campus

SUBMITTED BY BMC

BOSTON – The Healey-Driscoll Administration today announced a key step in advancing its plans for the Shattuck Campus at Morton Street by provisionally designating Boston Medical Center and its partners (BMC Team) for the redevelopment of the Campus. With this provisional designation, the BMC Team will begin refining its proposed redevelopment plans based on considerations such as public feedback and funding availability.

This announcement follows the Commonwealth's June 2022 Request for Proposals (RFP) and an internal evaluation process. The RFP was informed by extensive engagement with neighbors, elected officials, a community advisory group, advocates, and other stakeholders.

The Commonwealth's vision for this site, which is statutorily deed-restricted for public health use, is an innovative campus that promotes health, reduces barriers to treatment, integrates physical and behavioral health care with supportive housing, and prioritizes connections to the natural environment.

The BMC Team's initial proposal includes two facilities with 326 treatment beds, 200 units of permanent supportive housing, 205 units of family supportive housing, 120 emergency housing beds, and seven-plus acres of green and open space. The proposal does not represent a final plan for implementation and will be subject to further dialogue with the Commonwealth and community representatives.

"The vision for this site was developed with our partners in the community, the providers on the front lines of our housing and health care systems, and leaders in this cross-agency collaborative effort," said Mary Beckman, Senior Advisor, Executive Office of Health and Human Services. "This project will ensure that this campus improves connections between patients and critical care, particularly for the chronically unhoused and those struggling with substance use disorders."

"The proposed redevelopment of the Shattuck site leans in to the Commonwealth's commitment to utilize this space to improve public health," said Dr. Robert Goldstein, Commissioner, Department of Public Health. "The vision creates a multiuse campus that embraces housing first, promotes harm reduction, and meets people where they are and will effectively and efficiently provide the most vulnerable community members with the resources they need."

"This prospective redevelopment partnership represents a creative and cost-effective way to take a state asset that is beyond its useful life and leverage it into support for those most vulnerable in our communities," said Carol Gladstone, Commissioner of the Division of Capital Asset Management and Maintenance. "By prioritizing supportive housing on this site, integrating access to vital programs and services, and improving green space and connections to the neighborhood, this project has the potential to meet a key regional demand in a transformative way."

"At BMC, we understand the compelling need to reshape how care is delivered to impact the complex crisis of mental illness and substance use disorders, and the resulting challenge of homelessness," said Alastair Bell, MD, MBA, President and CEO of Boston Medical Center Health System. "People suffering from these conditions require a new model of care—one that offers an integrated continuum of services, delivered by leading experts devoted to long-term solutions. We are proud to partner with esteemed community-based organizations on this novel healthcare-and-housing model."

In a related project, the Commonwealth is in process of relocating Shattuck Hospital services to the East Newton Pavilion in the South End. Construction of the Newton Pavilion facility is expected to be completed in 2026.

To learn more about the Shattuck Campus at Morton Street please visit the Commonwealth's project website.

Mayor Michelle Wu has announced the 27th annual Mayor's Garden Contest highlighting the hard work of Boston's urban gardeners. The competition provides the perfect opportunity to recognize the skills of all Boston residents who contribute to the beauty of the city's landscape.

Boston's green thumbs have until 11:59 p.m. on Wednesday, July 12, to submit their gardens for award contention. The contest recognizes gardeners who have landscaped, planted flowers, trees, shrubs, and, in the process, helped beautify Boston's neighborhoods.

Gardeners or those nominating their favorite gardeners may find printable and online nomination forms at boston.gov/mayors-garden-contest. Judges will fan out across the city visiting finalists the week of July 24. Once the votes are tallied, first place winners will receive the coveted "Golden Trowel" award from Mayor Wu while second and third place winners will be awarded certificates.

Gardeners who have won three or more times in the last ten years will be automatically entered into the Hall of Fame. These distinguished Hall-of-Famers are not eligible to enter as contestants but are invited to return as judges.

First place winners are eligible for a drawing for a JetBlue Grand Prize consisting of roundtrip flights for two to any nonstop destination from Boston. Terms, conditions, and blackout dates apply. In addition, Mahoney's Garden Centers will provide gardener's gift bags to the top three winners in each category, as well as gift certificates for the 2023 Hall of Fame winners.

alongside Habitat Greater Boston staff and volunteers to help build their future homes in lieu of a downpayment. When the homes are complete, each family receives a no-interest mortgage with monthly payments capped at no more than 30% of their gross income.

Additionally, partner families complete a series of first-time homebuyer courses to prepare them for the responsibilities and opportunities of homeownership.

Volunteers contribute about 70% of the labor to build Habitat Greater Boston homes, with the remainder performed by staff and licensed subcontractors. Funding for Habitat Greater Boston homes comes from a network of generous supporters.

Since 1987, Habitat Greater Boston has built 122 affordable homes for more than 630 individuals. The organization is nearing completion on a two-family home in Mission Hill and has five townhomes under construction in Malden. Plans for upcoming projects include more than two-dozen additional homes in Dorchester and Weston.

de Lappe, who actually recreated her mentor's choreography for a 1979 Broadway revival. Not surprisingly, her efforts for the RMT staging possess the kind of folk influences that make the musical's celebration in movement of farmers and cowmen so pioneering and winning.

If the show's simple book dominated by the romance of appealing cowman Curly and spunky farm-based Laurey may seem tame to some Rodgers and Hammerstein buffs (this critic included) who prefer the racism-confronting text of the duo's "South Pacific," no matter. At the same time, R & H do provide the troubled lonely work hand Jud with a moment of sympathy with a prescient number (that may call to mind the work of Kurt Weill) about feeling marginalized fittingly entitled "Lonely Room." Bertone's staging—as with Tony Award winning Shuler Hensley in the 2002 Broadway revival—makes Jud's signature lament—movingly sung by Boston-based Daniel Forest Sullivan, reprising his work in the 2011 RMT production. That moment takes on additional paths after Troilo brings hearty edginess to Curly's striking duo with his rival for Laurey on "Poor Judd Is Dead."

The slow development of the parallel romances—Curley and Laurey and Will Parker notwithstanding, the lead and featured cast members are so convincing in their roles that the song and dance virtues of the musical easily trump any somewhat dated plotting. Troilo, rightly in high demand for his vibrant vocals and strong acting (recently in Lyric Stage's "A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder" and SpeakEasy Stage's "The Prom") has all of Curly's expansive optimism—especially in a very resonant "OH, What a Beautiful Morning." Kayla Shimizu captures Laurey's independent-mindedness as well her deep love for Curly.

Rebekah Rae Robles—a Boston Conservatory at Berklee graduate—finds all of Ado Annie's spirit. Boston Conservatory senior Jack Mullin is a standout as Will—particularly with strong moves in the high-kicking winner "Kansas City." Rich-voiced Carolyn Saxon, who has worked on Broadway, catches Aunt Eller's warmth and wisdom. Johnny Gordon is a hoot as Persian peddler Ali Hakim. Joel Douglas as Dream Curly and Nicole Volpe—who dances with City Ballet of Boston—as Dream Laurey are elegant and graceful partners—with fine technique and stunning lifts. Veteran music director Dan Rodriguez does full justice to the very tuneful score—notably on the lively Overture and the title company rouser as statehood approaches (1907).

Call RMT's robust "Oklahoma!" a dream of a revival.

flexible funding for essential move-in costs, such as furniture and security deposits, that are not typically covered by other sources.

"Pine Street Inn is thrilled to receive this grant from Cummings Foundation," said Lyndia Downie, president and executive director, Pine Street Inn. "Their extraordinary generosity will be life-changing for so many, and having flexible funding for move-in costs will make an enormous difference. We are honored and grateful to have the Foundation's long-term partnership as we work to solve homelessness," she added.

The grant award will expand the tools available to the organization's street outreach team. Pine Street Inn is the only organization in Boston providing street outreach every night to individuals experiencing homelessness. On foot during the day and by vans at night, the street outreach team works nearly around the clock, 365 days a year. While best known for providing the basics of food, blankets, emotional support and access to shelter for people on the street, Pine Street has become increasingly focused on helping people move directly into housing as part of its strategic commitment to housing-based solutions.

"The way the local nonprofit sector perseveres, steps up, and pivots to meet the shifting needs of the community is most impressive," said Cummings Foundation executive director Joyce Vyriotes. "We are incredibly grateful for these tireless efforts to support people in the community and to increase equity and access to opportunities. We are proud to support these efforts, including Pine Street Inn's critical mission to end homelessness," she added.

The Cummings $30 Million Grant Program primarily supports Massachusetts nonprofits that are based in and serve Middlesex, Essex and Suffolk counties. The majority of the grant decisions was made by about 90 volunteers. They worked across a variety of committees to review and discuss the proposals and then, together, determine which requests would be funded. Among these community volunteers were business and nonprofit leaders, mayors, college presidents, and experts in areas such as finance and DEI (diversity, equity, and inclusion).

Cummings Foundation has now awarded $480 million to greater Boston nonprofits. The complete list of this year's 150 grant winners, plus nearly 1,500 previous recipients, is available at www.CummingsFoundation.org. Pine Street Inn has received several Cummings Foundation grants in the past, and the current grant marks the largest to date.
